Welcome to Ladybird

Jackson came into Ladybird's care after being brought to Hamilton Animal Services as a stray. This poor guy spent quite awhile in shelter before we were able to rescue him. We're still learning more about his personality and waiting to for his vet report, but we know that he's very happy to be out of a cage and given a large area to enjoy and explore. More...

Foster News

Thelma and Louise are bonded bunnies that have been in Ladybird foster care since November. Sadly, these poor girls were left behind in an apartment when their owner moved out. Despite it all, they are healthy, sweet, friendly girls who are thriving in their current cage-free, bunny-proof room. A big bonus is that they're litter-trained. Adopt Thelma and Louise today!

Congratulations, Chestnut!

From being abandoned next to a dumpster at the age of four months old, to getting a second chance at the best life possible, Ladybird is thrilled to report that our sweet pal Chestnut found a loving forever home with great people and another bunny to pal around with. Congratulations, Chestnut! We're so happy for you.

Bunnies, bunnies and more bunnies...

Since ancient times, bunnies have been a symbol of springtime and renewal. Unfortunately, in recent years, they've also become a symbol of an overwhelmed shelter system. Post-pandemic surrenders, backyard breeding, and giving bunnies as gifts are all contributing to the problem. Most shelters are beyond full. So what happens when more homeless bunnies need a safe haven? Ladybird rescues as many bunnies as we have foster homes for, but more needs to be done in terms of attitudes towards bunnies as pets. It's important for would-be pet owners to do the proper research when choosing the right pet for your lifestyle.

- How much space and time can you offer your pet?
- Are you able to commit to the amount of work it takes to care for your pet?
- Can you afford the cost of caring for your pet this year and in the future?
- What is the lifespan of your pet?
- What will your plan be in the event of an emergency?
- Does your pet's type and temperament fit harmoniously with the humans in the household?
- Not all vets serve small animals and exotics. Is there a vet nearby that will accommodate your pet?

Look what love can do...

Albeit a biased stance, we would argue that taking an animal's needs and quality of life into consideration is far more essential than our own wishes and wants. When considering a furry, scaled or feathered addition to your family, please don't shop. Choose adoption! So many wonderful homeless and abandoned animals are waiting to love and be loved.

Until next time, with love,
